

The presence of Plotinus: the self, contemplation, and spiritual exercise in the Enneads

16-18 June 2021 (online)

Contact: Mateusz Stróżyński monosautos@gmail.com <https://amu.academia.edu/MateuszStróżyński>

THE SUBJECT OF THE CONFERENCE

In the center of “The School of Athens”, a famous fresco by Raphael, we can see Plato and Aristotle, the two philosophers who may have been indeed the greatest thinkers of antiquity. However, the scholarly endeavor of the last century has demonstrated with increasing consistency that Plotinus – although his name and legacy is not so popular – could well stand next to them, especially so, because he attempted to synthesize the views of those great masters of the past. His presence in the Western philosophy was, perhaps, a more silent one, but also very influential. Since Late Antiquity, Christian, Jewish and Muslim philosophers were inspired by him as well as Renaissance Platonists and German Idealists. In year 2020, 1750 years had passed by since Plotinus died in a Campanian villa during what seemed to be the last wave of an ancient pandemic, usually called the “Cyprian plague”. Or, as he saw it, since his final ascent from “the divine in us to the divine in the All”. The conference was planned for the year 2020 to celebrate Plotinus’ presence in the Western tradition, but had to be postponed for obvious reasons.

One of the topics which has recently attracted a lot of scholarly attention is Plotinus’ view of the self. It seems original, interesting and refreshing in the midst of our “culture of narcissism”, where we tend to be preoccupied more than ever by concepts such as the self, self-realization, identity, and individualism. What we would like to discuss, however, is not only Plotinus’ philosophical view of the self, but the connections between his concept of the self and the practical dimension of his philosophy, famously described by Pierre Hadot as “spiritual exercise” and “the way of life”. During the three days of our online meeting, we will explore the connections between Plotinus’ view of the self, its contemplative knowledge of the divine realities, which is the goal of philosophical life, and the practical methods of arriving at this knowledge and at the transformation of the self.

Those interested in attending the conference remotely, please, contact Mateusz Stróżyński for further details (email address: monosautos@gmail.com).

PROGRAM

Day 1: The self

Wednesday, 16 June 2021

Session Chair: Mateusz Stróżyński

- 14h30 (CEST) Opening of the conference
- 15h00 Keynote lecture
The demiurgic Intellect and individual intellects in Plotinus
Lloyd Gerson (University of Toronto)
- 16h30 Break
- 17h00 Plotinus: the self as the logos of the particularized soul
Siobhan Doyle (University College Dublin)
- 18h00 The self as potential for self-consciousness and independence
Yady Oren (University of Jerusalem)

Day 2 : Contemplation

Thursday, 17 June 2021

Session Chair: Maria Marcinkowska-Rosót

- 15h00 Keynote lecture
Beginning to resemble the ground on which you walk: Ennead V.8.10.30
Sara Ahbel-Rappe (University of Michigan)
- 16h30 Break
- 17h00 The dimmest intellection: Nature's creation and awareness in Plotinus
Ágoston Guba (Gyula Moravcsik Institute, RCH, ELKH.)
- 18h00 Beauty and spiritual exercises in the ascent towards God in Plotinus
Luciana Gabriela Santoprete (Laboratoire d'Études sur les Monothéismes, CNRS)

Contact: Mateusz Stróżyński monosautos@gmail.com <https://amu.academia.edu/MateuszStróżyński>

Day 3: Spiritual Exercise

Friday, 18 June 2021

Session Chair: Krystyna Bartol

- 15h00 Keynote lecture
Rhetoric, philosophy, and spiritual exercise in Plotinus
Christian Tornau (Julius-Maximilians-Universität Würzburg)
- 16h30 Break
- 17h00 Everywhere and nowhere: the textual indeterminacy of the undescended soul in Plotinus as performative anagogic writing
Nicholas Banner (Independent)
- 18h00 Imagination and spiritual exercise in Plotinus
Mateusz Stróżyński (Adam Mickiewicz University)
- 19h00 Closing remarks